(d) whether Government propose to claim charges from the organizers of the rally; and

(e) if not, the reasons therefor and what are the policy guidelines of Railways for the ticketless travellers for attending political rallies?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF RAILWAYS (SHRI BANDARU DATTATRAYA): (a) Yes, Sir. To clear the extra rush of traffic on 29.9.2002, 12 special trains were run and 23 extra coaches were attached with the regular train services.

(b) to (e) Railways did not allow people to travel without tickets. Ticketless travellers, when apprehended, are penalised as per relevant rules. However, in case of very heavy rush of passengers at times of melas and rallies, it becomes extremely difficult for the Railways, with their limited strength of ticket checking staff & RPF personnel, to effectively check the entry of unauthorized passengers, both in trains and at station premises despite their best efforts. Such situations may lead to law and order problems, which can be tackled with the State Government's assistance only.
